Second Semester	15 July 2019 to 18 October 2019 (full time UZ)
Third Semester	4 November 2019 to 8 April 2020 (Field Research and Dissertations) (Data analysis and write-up fulltime at UZ , 3 February 2020 to 8 April 2020)

The First Semester will cover Theories and Perspectives in Women's Law, Research Methodologies and Methods in Women's Law, Human Rights and Women and the Field Research course. In the Second Semester candidates will choose two courses from a number of optional courses. In the Third Semester, candidates will carry out field research in their own home country for their dissertation. The write up of the dissertation should take place at the SEARCWL, University of Zimbabwe between 3 February and 8 April, 2020.

Qualifications

1 A candidate for the Masters in Women's Law must have a first Degree in Law in the Second Division or above and have postgraduate experience in areas related to women and the law.

2 A candidate for the Masters in Women's Socio-Legal Studies must have a first Degree in the Second Division or above and have post-graduate experience in areas related to women and the law.

For both programmes well qualified candidates, particularly women with young children, and persons from marginalized groups, those managing disabilities and men are especially encouraged to apply.

All applicants are required to submit, with their applications, a 500 word outline of how they believe the Masters in Women's Law or the Masters in Women's Socio-Legal Studies depending on the programme applied for will assist them in their work and outreach activities at national or regional levels.

Successful candidates are expected to make their own leave arrangements and to be in a position to fund their studies, including subsistence and where applicable travel expenses. Information on the basic costs of pursuing the programmes may be obtained from the SEARCWL administrators at the email addresses below.
